

Bio for Linda Vaccaro

Linda Vaccaro retired from a large information technology firm in 2016 after twenty-five years of service where she worked in the computer operations. Linda felt that her time spent working in the drab and sterile environment of computer banks and server rooms where there was no leeway for creativity pushed her to seek the world of painting in retirement because of its comparatively rich nuances of color, poetry of line and form, and balance and symmetry. Linda finds that the paints, techniques and, flashes of color revitalize her. With each stroke, Linda says that it energizes her and continues to be a path of wellness and opening of her feelings, hopes, and dreams. She enjoys painting portraits, still life, and scenery using acrylic and oil mediums.
